

Novo Renewing Joy in Life

Novo Renewing Joy in Life is looking for a neurofeedback clinician to provide children and adults with the support needed to cope with chronic or acute mental illness using neurofeedback. The position would be contractual with hours determined by caseload. The clinician will meet with patients in the office 1-5 times per week for 45 minutes at a time providing neurofeedback. The clinician is responsible for charting each session's progress. The clinician will also be required to attend a clinical staff meeting for one hour per month with the time to be determined

Applicant must have at least Master's level degree in School Psychology, Child Development, Counseling, Neuroscience, or another similar field, and/or the equivalent of BCIA Certification. Experience (1 – 2 years) preferred but not required, as we are willing to train the right person. Consideration will be given to those with BCIA certification that do not have a Master's degree for an alternative position with the company. Preference will be given to a BCIA certified provider or to an individual who is willing to be certified within 1 year of employment.
